- Evaluation is done via a token error rate (TER) metric: Compute token-based edit distance between reference and predicted hypotheses where a token is a word in English and a character in Mandarin

- DLMs contain a lot of complementary information compared to mixed LM which we leverage by combining the "lattices" via an ensemble

- The combined ASR system shows statistically significant improvements in TER

ASR Experiments

ASR Experiments

- Evaluation is done via a token error rate (TER) metric: Compute token-based edit distance between reference and predicted hypotheses where a token is a word in English and a character in Mandarin

- DLMs contain a lot of complementary information compared to mixed LM which we leverage by combining the "lattices" via an ensemble

- The combined ASR system shows statistically significant improvements in TER

ASR Results